So, how do you know if a stuffed animal is safe for children?

The quality of Embroider Buddy™ embroiderable stuffed animals cannot be matched, with each buddy being made of the best finish, softest materials, embroidered eyes, and newest whimsical designs. Embroider Buddy™ work closely with their embroiderers and each individual customer until they get things just right.

Embroider Buddy™ has been in the toy business for 70 years and for much of that time they have sold stuffed toys. As generations of happy children have played with their plush animals over the years the company have always prided themselves in self-regulating toy safety. Secure eyes, good seams and good quality plush – it's always been common sense.

In the past 10 years or so, the governments of many countries have become more involved in regulating toys. It's now necessary to invest in expensive laboratory tests and reports. At this time, unfortunately there is no standard for worldwide testing. Since children are the same all around the world, Embroider Buddy™ think that would make a lot of sense. But until that happens they have to do their due diligence when testing toys, be it for USA, Canada, Europe or Australia – the countries where they sell the most Embroider Buddy™ and other plush toy products.

When purchasing stuffed toys always look to see if they're from a reputable company. A reputable company will answer your questions. As a reseller of toys you need to know that YOU are distributing a quality product that meets safety standards in order to protect your reputation and prevent you from liability.

Here's a four-point checklist to help you know if the product you are buying is safe:

- 1) Look for seams that are secure. No stuffing should be exposed. Loose stuffing is a child hazard if swallowed.
- 2) Ensure the eyes and nose are secure.
- 3) Make sure there are no loose threads or strings.
- 4) Toys should be washable. (Embroider Buddy™ skins and pods are machine washable and can go in both the washer and dryer).
